

Mahbubur Rahman [mrahman@york.cuny.edu] teaches political science at York College of the City University of New York (CUNY). Previously, he taught at Clark Atlanta University. Dr. Rahman holds a Ph.D in political science from Clark Atlanta University. His fields of interest include religion and politics, Islam and democracy, contemporary Islamist movements, and politics in South Asia and the Middle East. He has received several grants and awards including a Fulbright Fellowship. He is the co-author of Bangladesh: Towards National Consensus (Dhaka: BISS, 1990) and has contributed articles to a number of edited volumes, including “Parliamentary Democracy in Bangladesh: Retrospect and Prospect,” in Bangladesh Society, Polity and Economy, ed. Iftekharuzzaman and A. Sabur Khan (Dhaka: BISS, 1993), and “The Accountability of the Executive in a Parliamentary System,” in Parliamentary Democracy in Bangladesh, ed. Emajuddin Ahamed (Dhaka: Karim Book Corporation, 1992). Originally from Bangladesh, Dr. Rahman was an assistant professor in the Department of Government and Politics at Jahangirnagar University, Savar, Dhaka, Bangladesh. He was also a research associate at Bangladesh Institute of International and Strategic Studies (BISS) and contributed extensively to the Institute’s quarterly journal The BISS Journal. Since 2001, he has served as editor of the bi-monthly magazine The Message International, in which he published the following articles: “Liberty and Security,” “Clash of Civilizations or Dialogue of Civilizations?” “Islam and Democracy: Coming out of Misconceptions,” “Muslim-Christian Dialogue: Some Pressing Issues,” and “Moderation in Islam: Understanding and Misunderstanding.”