

Sherine F. Hamdy is associate professor of anthropology at University of California, Irvine, CA. She studies medical anthropology and science and technology in the Middle East. She served as associate professor of anthropology at Brown University, Providence, RI, where she taught since 2006. She received her B.A. (honors) and M.A. from Stanford University and her Ph.D. from New York University. Her article “When the State and Your Kidneys Fail: Political Etiologies in an Egyptian Dialysis Ward” (American Ethnologist, 2008) won the 2009 Rudolph Virchow Award from the Society of Medical Anthropology, and is being taught in various courses throughout American universities. Her book, Our Bodies Belong to God: Organ Transplants, Islam, and the Struggle for Human Dignity in Egypt (University of California, 2012), received honorable mention in the 2013 Clifford Geertz Book Prize from the Anthropology of Religion Section of the American Anthropological Association (AAA). Hamdy was a member of the School of Social Sciences at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, 2011-12, and a Greenwall Foundation Scholar in Bioethics from 2012-2015. She is currently a Faculty Fellow at the Watson Institute for International and Public Affairs, and Director of Undergraduate Studies for Anthropology at Brown. She is co-authoring a book with Soha Bayoumi (Harvard University) tentatively titled, Doctors of the Revolution: Health and Social Justice Activism in Egypt, on the role of health care professionals in Egypt’s popular uprisings. Hamdy is interested in a larger social project pertaining to the reframing of “Islamic Bioethics,” the use of comics in anthropology and medicine, and the study of Arabic political cartoons and comics as a form of cultural and political expression. As an experimental ethnographer who uses comics to bring her research to a wider audience, she recently published her first graphic novel – Lissa: A Story about Medical Promise, Friendship, and Revolution. Her anthropological studies have been published in Medical Anthropology; Culture, Medicine, and Psychiatry; the Journal of Theoretical Medicine and Bioethics; and American Ethnologist.
