

Babacar Mbengue [bmbengu1@depaul.edu] is adjunct professor of Islamic studies at DePaul University's Islamic World Studies Program, Chicago, IL. He received his Ph.D in Arabic and Islamic studies from Cheikh Anta Diop University in Dakar, Senegal. He earned degrees from various universities, including Sorbonne Nouvelle University in Paris, and Cambridge University, UK, and was a Fulbright scholar with residence at Loyola University, Chicago, IL. He taught at numerous institutions, including the University of Dakar, Senegal, and Oakton College in the suburbs of Chicago. Fluent in four languages, Arabic, Wolof, French and English, Dr. Mbengue wrote articles, translated books, websites and monographs in these languages.