

Celene Ayat Lizzio [Celene@Brandies.edu] is a lecturer on Islam, gender, and interfaith relations at Merrimack College where she serves as an advisor to the Center for the Study of Jewish-Christian-Muslim Relations. She has written over twenty-five articles and book chapters exploring Muslim family law, feminist theory, and religious leadership, among other topics. Her current research project, undertaken in collaboration with Thoraya Obaid, focuses on depictions of Arabs and Muslims in bestselling Anglophone fiction. Ms. Lizzio has earned a number of awards and fellowships, including being named as a Harvard Presidential Scholar, a fellow of the Center for Inter-Religious and Community Leadership Education at Andover Newton Theological School and Hebrew College, and a fellow in Religion, Diplomacy and International Relations from the Woodrow Wilson School at Princeton University. She is currently pursuing a Ph.D. in Arabic and Islamic Civilizations in the Department of Near Eastern and Judaic Studies at Brandeis University. Her dissertation explores ritual, sacred healing, gender, and wellness practices in Shadhiliyya Sufi communities in North America. Ms. Lizzio was the first Muslim to earn a Masters of Divinity from Harvard Divinity School and completed her bachelors with highest honors from Princeton