

Ehsan Moghaddasi [ehsan.moghaddasi@gmail.com] received his MA (2008) from the University of Tehran, Iran, in dramatic literature, his dissertation focused on a comparative study of Mikhail Bakhtin theories about literature, society and dramatic arts, especially carnivalesque forms of performing arts. In the Fall of 2009, Mr. Moghaddasi will begin his Ph.D studies in sociology of arts at the University of Tehran. In July 2009, he gave a presentation on Iranian nationalism at the British Society of Middle Eastern Studies' Conference hosted by the University of Manchester, UK, where he focused on the emergence of nationalism and its influence on escalating ethnic conflicts in Iran from an historical perspective. He made three other presentations at conferences organized by the British Society of Middle Eastern Studies which were hosted by the University of Exeter, UK; University of Ottawa, Canada; and a workshop at State University of San Francisco, CA, USA. His interests include the study of Iranian contemporary history in Iranian and Turkish societies and cultures from an historical and interdisciplinary perspective.