

Ermin Sinanovic [ermin.sinanovic.bk@usna.edu] is assistant professor of political science at the United States Naval Academy in Annapolis, MD. He obtained his MA and Ph.D in political science from Syracuse University, NY. His doctoral dissertation was on “The Role of Religious Ideas in Contemporary Islamic Revival: The Case of Malaysia.” Dr. Sinanovic received both his BA and MA in Islamic studies from the International Islamic University Malaysia (IIUM), Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia. His MA thesis at the International Institute of Islamic Thought and Civilization (ISTAC), Kuala Lumpur, focused on “The Majority Principle and its Application in Decision-Making Processes: An Inquiry into Islamic Legal and Political Thought.” His research interests include transnational Islamic revivalism, Southeast Asian politics, Islamic movements, Middle East politics, Islamic political thought, and Islam and politics in general. At the Naval Academy, Dr. Sinanovic teaches courses on Southeast Asian politics, Middle East politics, and Islam and politics. His work has been published in refereed journals and edited volumes. He is currently working on the following research projects: Muslim cooperation within the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC); the impact of electoral processes on Islamist political parties in Indonesia; and path varieties within Islamic movements. Dr. Sinanovic is a faculty adviser for the Muslim Midshipmen Club at the Naval Academy where he also leads Friday prayers. In addition to his academic interests, he likes to travel, taste and enjoy various world cuisines, and drink Bosnian coffee. He was born in Bosnia and Herzegovina, and has lived in Croatia and Malaysia. He speaks Bosnian, English, Arabic, and Malay. He currently resides in Edgewater, MD.