

Hasan Azad [ha2248@columbia.edu] is a doctoral candidate in the Department of Religion at Columbia University, NY, with a focus on Islamic studies. He holds an M.A. in Islamic societies and cultures, and a B.A. in English, both from the University of London. Mr. Azad has received fellowships to fund his research from the Institute of Religion Culture and Public Life, and the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences at Columbia University. His dissertation is an interdisciplinary examination of the role of Islamic ethics in constituting diasporic communities in the West. His research interests include postcolonial religious identities, secularism and secularity, Islamic politics, political theory, Islamophobia studies, Shari'ah, Sufism, and the role of new media in (re)shaping Islam. His online publications include “Why are there no Muslim philosophers?” <http://www.aljazeera.com/indepth/opinion/2014/06/muslim-philosophers-2014610135114713259.html> and “What is philosophy? Or is all of life but a metaphor?” <http://www.aljazeera.com/indepth/opinion/2014/06/what-philosophy-all-life-but-meta-2014629697928406.html> both published by AlJazeera, and “Secularity and Secularism, Islam and Muslims: A Conversation between Daniel Martin Varisco and Hasan Azad,” published by Sacred Matters (<https://scholarblogs.emory.edu/sacredmatters/2014/06/12/secularity-and-secularism-islam-and-muslims-a-conversation-between-daniel-martin-varisco-and-hasan-azad/>). Mr. Azad is founder of the Facebook discussion groups Islam and Theory and Islam and Secularity. His essay “The Reconstruction of the Muslim Self: Muhammad Iqbal, Khudi, and Thinking through Western Selfhood,” will be published in the forthcoming special edition of the Islamophobia Studies Journal (Berkeley). His entry “Sexuality” will be published in the forthcoming Encyclopedia of Islam and the Muslim World (2nd edition).