

Helena Cobban [hcobban@gmail.com] is a veteran writer, researcher, and program organizer on global affairs. Ms. Cobban contributed a regular column on global issues to The Christian Science Monitor from 1990 until the paper stopped having regular columnists in 2007. She is a contributing editor for the Boston Review, where she has published numerous essays on Palestinian and other international issues since 2001. Since 2003, she has published Just World News, a lively blog on global issues that has gained a broad international readership. She contributes periodically to ForeignPolicy.com and to The Christian Science Monitor. In 2008, Ms. Cobban published her seventh book, Re-engage! America and the World after Bush. Congressman Lee Hamilton, Co-chair of the Iraq Study Group, described it as, “An impassioned, thought-provoking, and accessible brief from a highly esteemed journalist on how all of us – as individuals – can act to help better our country and world.” Ms. Cobban has also published widely in other print media on three continents. From 1993 through 2006, she contributed a regular column on diplomatic and strategic affairs to Al-Hayat (London). She has served as a visiting senior fellow at Harvard University, Georgetown University, the Brookings Institution, and elsewhere. She currently sits on the Middle East Advisory Committee of Human Rights Watch and is one of two Quakers who are members of the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies. She speaks French and Arabic, and divides her time between Washington, DC, and Charlottesville, VA. The following are among her book publications: Amnesty after Atrocity?: Healing Nations after Genocide and War Crimes (Boulder, CO, Paradigm Publishers, 2006); The Israeli-Syrian Peace Talks: 1991-96 and Beyond (US Institute of Peace, 2000); The Moral Architecture of World Peace: Nobel Laureates Discuss our Global Future (University Press of Virginia, 2000); The Superpowers and the Syrian-Israeli Conflict, (New York: Praeger, 1991); The Making of Modern Lebanon (London: Hutchinsons, and Boulder, CO, Westview, 1985); and The Palestinian Liberation Organisation: People, Power, and Politics (Cambridge University Press, 1984). Born in England in 1952, Ms. Cobban received her BA and MA from Oxford University, UK. From 1974 through 1981, she worked as a Beirut-based correspondent for news outlets, including The Christian Science Monitor, The Sunday Times of London, ABC News, and the BBC. Since 1982, she has been based primarily in the United States, though her work has taken her back to the Middle East many times, and to many parts of Europe, Africa, and Asia.