

Jasmin Zine [jzine@wlu.ca] is associate professor, Sociology, and director of the MA program in Cultural Analysis and Social Theory [CAST] Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada. Her areas of teaching and research include critical race and ethnic studies, postcolonial theory and anti-colonial research methods, education and social justice, cultural studies, Canadian Muslim studies and Muslim women's studies. Her publications include numerous journal articles on Muslims and education in the Canadian diaspora as well as the field of Islamic feminism and Muslim women's studies. Her book entitled, Canadian Islamic Schools: Unraveling the Politics of Faith, Gender, Knowledge and Identity (University of Toronto Press) is the first ethnography of Islamic schooling in North America and she has recently edited a book entitled, Islam in the Hinterlands: Exploring Muslim Cultural Politics in Canada for the University of British Columbia Press (forthcoming). She is also co-editing a book on the literary, cinematic and cultural representation of Muslim women entitled, Contested Imaginaries: Transnational Feminist Reading Practices, Ethics and Political Concerns. Presently, Prof. Zine is conducting a national study funded by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) on the impact of 9/11 and the "war on terror" on Muslim youth in Canada. In addition, she is working on an international project with the Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights at the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (ODHIR/OSCE), the Council of Europe, and UNESCO on developing international guidelines for educators and policy makers on combating Islamophobia and discrimination against Muslims. She is presently serving as Secretary on the AMSS Board of Directors and has coordinated AMSS Canadian Regional Conferences for 5 years.