

Joshua M. Roose [J.Roose@uws.edu.au] is senior research officer of the Religion and Society Research Centre at the University of Western Sydney, Australia, working on an Australian Research Council funded study examining shari'a and legal pluralism in Australia and the United States. He is a co-convenor of The Australian Sociological Association (TASA) "Ethnicity, Migration and Multiculturalism" thematic group which will host a panel on the "Intersection of Religion and Multiculturalism" at the International Sociological Association Conference in Japan in 2014. In 2013, Dr. Roose was a visiting scholar and researcher working for Professor Bryan Turner at the Committee for the Study of Religion at City University of New York. He completed his Ph.D. at the Asia Institute, the University of Melbourne (2012). He has worked on four Australian Research Council funded studies examining multiculturalism, Muslim radicalization, citizenship and belonging in Australia, the United States and Britain, and is currently working for Monash University (School of Political and Social Inquiry) as a postdoctoral researcher. Dr. Roose has presented his work at national and international conferences in the United Kingdom and United States, and has been active in media engagement including interviews for local and national radio, The Australian newspaper, The Conversation and ABC's The Drum.