

Junaid S. Ahmad [junaidahmad@gmail.com] has a Juris Doctor (law) degree from the College of William and Mary, USA. He is currently a lecturer and a Ph.D candidate in the Dept. of Religious Studies at the University of Cape Town, South Africa, and is also a visiting faculty member in the Faculty of Law, Lahore University of Management Sciences (LUMS), Pakistan. He served as president of the US-based National Muslim Law Students Association (NMLSA), and is on the board of the Muslim Peace Fellowship. He served on the Executive Board of the Domestic Violence Resource Project. He was editor of the Richmond Independent Media Center and worked with the National Interfaith Committee on Social Justice. He has been a longtime activist on issues related to corporate-led globalization, HIV/AIDS, militarism and war, and Palestine, working in such organizations as Amnesty International and Al-Awda (the Palestine Right of Return Committee). In Pakistan, he had worked with such groups as Educate Pakistan and the Peoples Rights Movement, the latter being at the forefront of issues related to social and economic justice in Pakistan. He continues to maintain an association with Positive Muslims, the Cape Town-based organization working on issues related to Muslims, HIV/AIDS and gender justice, a group with which he worked while he was in South Africa in 2004. Most recently, he, along with other Muslims, has formed the Abu Dharr Collective which is committed to the ideal of social justice and to articulating an Islamic theology of liberation. His research interests include political Islam, globalization, and social movements, and has lectured and written extensively on these topics.
