

Marcia Hermansen [mherman@luc.edu] is professor of Islamic studies in the Department of Theology and director of the Islamic World Studies Program at Loyola University Chicago, IL. Dr. Hermansen's academic research considers various aspects of Islam, integrating theory from religious studies, sociology, and cultural studies. Her initial specializations were Islam in South Asia and Islamic Mysticism. Her later work incorporates research in contemporary Islamic thought and movements, gender studies, and Muslims in the United States. She received her Ph.D from the University of Chicago in Arabic and Islamic studies, where she studied with the famous Muslim modernist scholar, Dr. Fazlur Rahman. During the course of her research and language training, she lived for extended periods in Egypt, Jordan, India, Iran, Turkey and Pakistan. She conducts research in Arabic, Persian, Urdu and Turkish as well as in major European languages. Dr. Hermansen has contributed numerous academic articles in the fields of Islamic thought, Sufism, Islam and Muslims in South Asia, Muslims in America, and Women and gender in Islam. Her study and translation (from Arabic) of Shah Wali Allah of Delhi's Hujjat Allah al-Baligha (The Conclusive Argument from God) was published in 1996. She is co-editor of the Encyclopedia of Islam and the Muslim World (2003), and is currently completing a book for Oxford, American Sufis. She served as chair of the Study of Islam Section, American Academy of Religion for two terms, and has received Fulbright scholarships to Malaysia, Pakistan, and India, and an American Research Council in Egypt Fellowship. She currently serves on numerous journal editorial boards, including Islamic Studies (Pakistan), Fieldwork in Religion (England), Comparative Islamic Studies, and the American Journal of Islamic Social Sciences (AJISS).