

Maria Massi Dakake [mdakakem@gmu.edu] holds a B.A. from Cornell University (1990) and an M.A. (1998) and Ph.D. (2000) in Near Eastern Studies from Princeton University. She is currently chair and associate professor in the Religious Studies Department at George Mason University (GMU) in Fairfax, VA. She is a founding member of GMU's interdisciplinary Islamic studies program and serves as director of the undergraduate minor program in Islamic studies. Her research interests and publications lie in the fields of Islamic intellectual history, with a particular interest in Shi'ite and Sufi traditions, and in women's religious experiences. Over the last several years, her work has focused primarily on the Qur'an and the tafsir tradition. Her book, The Charismatic Community: Shi'ite Identity in Early Islam, was published by SUNY Press in 2008. She has just completed work on a major collaborative project to produce the Harper Collins Study Qur'an, which includes verse-by-verse annotation and extensive commentary on the Qur'anic text, to be published in Spring 2015. She is currently working with Daniel Madigan on a co-edited volume, the Routledge Companion to the Qur'an, and is working independently on a monograph on the concept of religion as a universal phenomenon in the Qur'an and Islamic tradition. Prof. Dakake currently serves on the NAAIMS Board of Directors as Member at Large.