

Mohammad Hassan Khalil is associate professor of religious studies and adjunct professor of law at Michigan State University (MSU). Before returning to his hometown of East Lansing, Michigan, he was assistant professor of religion and visiting professor of law at the University of Illinois. He specializes in Islamic thought and is author of Islam and the Fate of Others: The Salvation Question (Oxford University Press, 2012) and editor of Between Heaven and Hell: Islam, Salvation, and the Fate of Others (Oxford University Press, 2013). His peer-reviewed journal articles and book chapters cover a variety of topics, including jihad, ethics, and historiography. He is currently the Islam section editor of Religion Compass, and serves on the Board of Directors of the Society for the Study of Muslim Ethics. Since 2014 he has served as the Director of the Michigan State University Muslim Studies Program (MSP). Established at MSU in 2006, the Muslim Studies Program coordinates research, teaching, and outreach about Muslim societies and states. Additionally, it organizes speakers, workshops, and conferences on a wide range of topics that reflect the rich diversity of Muslim communities around the world. The MSP is unique in the sense that instead of a regional focus, it has a global view of Muslim societies and states. It is an interdepartmental and interdisciplinary center whose faculty has appointments in various disciplines of social sciences and humanities at MSU.
