

Nebil Husayn [nhussen@princeton.edu] received his BA in Middle Eastern studies from the University of Virginia, with a concentration in Arabic, Persian and early Islamic history. A Fulbright fellowship from 2004-2006 provided an opportunity to complete research in Syria, where he became the public relations director for the Hāshimid Genealogy Trust. In addition to his research in the history and segmentation of Alid populations, he completed two years of seminary coursework in Arabic, law, history and theology in Damascus. He received an MA in Arabic and Islamic studies from the Near Eastern Languages and Civilizations Department at Harvard University in 2010. His MA thesis was entitled: “Discrepancies in Paternity: Alid Genealogy in Muslim Society.” He is currently a Ph.D student in the Near Eastern Studies Department at Princeton University. His research interests include the contributions of Alids in the Umayyad and Abbasid eras, pro-Alid treatises on the Imamate, and Mu’tazili and Shi’i legal theories and theology.
