

Neguin Yavari [yavarin@newschool.edu] is a faculty member in the Committee on Historical Studies at the New School of Social Research, NY, specializing in the Middle East. Her current research is on comparative intellectual history, on mirrors for princes specifically. Her monograph on that subject, Advice for the Sultan: Prophetic Voices and Secular Politics in Medieval Islam is forthcoming from Hurst/Oxford University Press in July 2013. Her latest article on contemporary Qur'anic hermeneutics, "Tafsir and The Mythology of Islamic Fundamentalism," is forthcoming in a volume on Tafsir and Islamic Intellectual History, edited by Johanna Pink & Andreas Görke, from Oxford University Press in December 2013. Dr. Yavari studies political thought and theology in the medieval period, with an emphasis on transitions from medieval to modern. In that context, the intersections of concept and rhetoric in political and theological thought in pre-modern Christian and Islamic societies are among the key foci of her research. Aspects of this research have been published previously: "Polysemous Texts and Reductionist Readings: Women and Heresy in the Siyar al-mulūk," (pp. 324-62) in Views from the Edge: Essays in Honor of Richard W. Bulliet, eds. Neguin Yavari & Lawrence Potter (New York: Columbia University Press, 2004); and, "Mirrors for Princes or a Hall of Mirrors: Niẓām al-Mulūk's Siyar al-mulūk Reconsidered," Al-Masāq: Islam and the Medieval Mediterranean, 20: 1 (2008), pp. 47-69.